CARICATURES OF OFFICIALS DRAW MOTORISTS' MIRTH

A NEW METHOD of badgering public officials, reminiscent of the humorous effigies in some European states, has made its appearance in Washington township, to the amusement of the motoring public.

Miss Marie Le Pleux, owner of the Scott's Corner service station, near Sunol, has lent her very considerable talents as an artist to sketching caricatures (of a not very complimentary nature) of various members of officialdom . The sketches are posted to public gaze at Miss Le Pleux's place of business. Her gasoline and oil sales has mounted surprisingly since the posting, by the way.

District Attorney Earl Warren leads off the gallery, depicted as "King of the Whitewashers," brush and all.

Governor Merriman is not spared, and appears in one of the more complicated posters as a very confused official.

Good-natured John J. Amaral, head of the Alameda County Junior Chamber of Commerce, and an ardent Pleasanton booster, comes in for a little kidding for his activity in luring traffic to the recent fiesta held in the Amador valley town.

There has been no official comment on the posters—that is, for publication—as yet, but a timid peace officer who doesn't live a hundred miles from Niles, was noted inspecting the blackboard signs through a spyglass at a safe distance. Anything may happen in the next few days.

POSTMASTERS WILL MEET AT NILES TONIGHT

Thirty members of the Alameda County Postmasters' Association will be guests of Washington township postal officials tonight at a dinner to be given at the Florence restaurant, Niles, according to Postmaster Howard V. Fournier, of Niles. The occasion will be in the nature of a regular meeting of the association, which gathers monthly in the various east bay cities.

Among the officials will be the following: Mrs. Nellie Donohoe, of Oakland; J. D. Chase, of San Jose; Ford Samuels, of Alameda; Frank Whiting, of Berkeley, and others.

Fournier states that an excellent special dinner is being prepared for the evening.

COMMISSIONERS TO BE NOMINATED FOR SEWER DISTRICT

Decoto's sanitary district moved nearer to reality early this week when committees were appointed by both the senior and junior chamber to nominate five commissioners if approval of county officials is forthcoming next Tuesday at the scheduled hearing.

The joint committee, from both civic groups will meet on September 18 to select the five who will have charge of the district. Peter Decoto, Walter Walker and A. A. Amaral will represent the senior chamber at the joint meeting, while Frank Thomas, head of the juniors, will lead his delegation.

The movement for the district was spurred on last week when word was received that preliminary approval of the project was given by federal PWA officials. The cost of the project will be about $112,000, part of which will be paid by the federal government. The remainder will be defrayed by the district itself.

TWO KILLED IN RAIL MISHAPS

Bodies of Itinerants Are Found At Decoto And Sunol

Two itinerants met their death in railroad mishaps in Washington township Tuesday night, it was learned early yesterday, when both bodies were discovered beside the tracks; one north of Decoto and the other near the Sunol bridge. Both men had been killed instantly.

The body at Decoto, tentatively identified by Deputy Coroner F. F. Botelho and John Lowman as William C. Baldwin, was found early yesterday by Manuel Abreu, of 806 Eleventh street, Decoto, section foreman. The skull had been shattered, as though the man had been thrown or had fallen from a passing train. Tattooing on the arm identified the corpse, Lowman said. The man was about forty-five years old.

Found near the tracks at Sunol, the second body had not been identified late yesterday. It is thought to be that of an aged itinerant seen often in this district.

According to word received here the Sunol accident occurred when train No. 279, westbound, struck the seventy-year-old man on the bridge. The train was stopped, and the body removed from beneath the wheels. It was left at the side of the tracks by the trainmen, it is reported.

OPENING FALL MEET OF TOYON BRANCH HELD YESTERDAY

Meeting for the first time this fall, members of the Toyon Branch, Childrens Hospital of Alameda County, gathered in the spacious gardens of the J. E. Thane home yesterday, to arrange for participation in the Founders' Tea, to be given tomorrow at the home of Miss S. B. Culver, 1600 Fernwood Drive, Piedmont.

The local branch, under the direction of the chairman, Mrs. J. R. Whipple, will gather autumn fruits and greenery for decorations at the Piedmont affair. With visitors from the east bay branches on hand, the meeting yesterday was in the form of an all-day picnic.

Supervisor Richmond On Road to Recovery, Report

According to reports received this week, Supervisor Ralph V. Richmond, recently incapacitated by illness, has recoved sufficiently to take up his supervisorial duties again. He is remainng at home for the most part, as his physicians are restricting his activities.

Leo Oliver, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Oliver, has completely recovered from an appendicitis operation undergone recently at Houston, Texas, where Oliver is employed by a major oil company.

ALARM SYSTEM FOR WATCHMAN INVESTIGATED

Need For Installation Is Shown By Battle Here Friday

A system whereby the nightwatchman may be called at any hour of the night is being contemplated by the Niles Junior Chamber of Commerce, following an altercation in a Niles restaurant last Friday night while the patrolman was out of reach at the other end of his beat.

Although the plan for a system of lights has been under consideration for some time, nothing definite had been done until the real need was illustrated last week. President Sam Kerns, of the junior group, has appointed a committee, headed by Lawrence Pine, to investigate cost of the installation, which will consist of a series of lights, visible from all points on the watchman's beat, to be operated from a central point, possibly from the office of the telephone operator. If the latter arrangement is made possible, the watchman will immediately get in touch with the operator to learn the whereabouts of the disturbance.

Friday night's fracas, which involved Domingo Valim, said to be Hayward's "bad boy," occurred in the Columbia Grill, allegedly when Arthor Wyman, of Niles, refused to ride with Valim and several Hayward henchmen. Wyman suffered a bruised eye and minor cuts in the fisticuffs. As far as could be determined early in the week, no complaint had been filed.

To protect Nightwatchman Art Roderick from accusations of negligence for not being on the spot when the battle occurred, a special Junior Chamber directors' meeting was called early Friday morning, at which the situation was explained, and the decision reached to seek installation of the new alarm system.

PWA AID IN HIGH SCHOOL PROJECT IS DENIED

Among ninety-three other projects throughout the state, the necessary repairs to strengthen the Washington Union High school buildings against earthquakes were denied PWA financial assistance, it was learned this week. Reason for the rejection is given as excessive "man-year" costs. The rejection, however, may not be final, inasmuch as the projects are yet to go before the federal allotment board. A change in the terms may yet make the federal aid possible.

The local project, involving a sum of approximately $25,000, will be delayed until the end of the school year, according to Principal A. J. Rathbone. He stated that funds are available for completion of the work, $17,000 to be spent this year and the remainder next. The initial amount has already been approved in tne present budget.

Norman B. Cozby On Vacation In North

Norman B. Cozby, president of the Seaside Printing Company, Long Beach, and a longtime friend of Norman H. Parks, publisher of the Register, is vacationing in northern California. He stopped in Niles for a visit with Mr. Parks last Thursday, then proceeded to San Francisco, where he will stay for a time.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Blacow left Tuesday for a week's vacation at Yosemite and Lake Tahoe.

SIX INJURED IN THREE CRASHES NEAR IRVINGTON

Mrs. Walter Johnson Hurt In Head-On Collision South of Town

The section of road between Irvington and Warm Springs figured heavily in auto accidents last week, when three crashes occurred, resulting in injuries to six people three of whom are well known residents of this township.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Johnson and daughter, Fay, of Irvington, figured in the most serious accident, when their car crashed headon into one driven by Clifford L. Dysel, of Santa Cruz, at the turn just south of Irvington last Wednesday night. Mrs. Johnson, most seriously hurt, suffered a compound fracture of the pelvis, and numerous lacerations. She was given first aid treatment by an Irvington physician, then rushed to a Hayward hospital in the Botelho ambulance. She is reported as recovering satisfactorily. Both Johnson and the daughter were extensively bruised and cut. Dysel, only occupant of the other machine, was seriously hurt. He was given first aid treatment, then taken to a San Jose hospital.

LIQUOR DEALERS ARE ORDERED TO OPEN FOOD PLACES

Six Niles liquor dealers were hailed before Michael Connolly, State Board of Equilization chief enforcement officer, at Oakland, last week, and were allowed ten days in which to install and place in operation restaurants in connection with their businesses here.

The citations to appear had come after investigators discovered that the offenders had allowed their restaurant businesses to languish after securing licences to sell liquor.

The six who appeared, and who this week have shined up their stoves and laid in a supply of sandwiches and short order material, are: J. N. Viveiros, Lawrence Bonturi, Lester Murphy, Martin Cavanaugh, D. M. Carvo and M. Pratali.

LOCAL SURVEYOR "KILLS" CLAIM OF ANGLE-TRISECTOR

Theodore F. Macknik, 21, of Detroit, has gone to a great deal of trouble for nothing in his effort to establish a formula for trisecting an angle, according to William Dutra, well-known local surveyor, who has chacked Macknik's theory by means of an involved mathematical process.

Dutra stated that inasmuch as mathematicians since Newton's time have tried in vain for a fool-proof formula, applicable to any angle, he was extremely skeptical of Macknik's claim, which was given wide publicity throughout the nation.

By devolping equations hinted in Macknik's attempt, and substituting his resultants in trigonometric form, Dutra conclusively proved that Macknik's formula, while it will come very close, and is good for rough purposes, breaks down by several minutes of arc. It would not be suitable for use in applied mathematics, Dutra said, hinting that he "would hate to build a bridge with it."

COUNTY TAX INCREASE SEEN

Preliminary Budget Shows Boost In '35-'36 General Levy

PROPERTY OWNERS WILL BE THE GOATS, ACCORDING TO FIGURES OF STATE TAX ASSOCIATION.

Property owners in Alameda county, in the face of their fervent hopes for a reduction in taxes, will probably find themselves just a step ahead of the wolf, next month, when the county tax bills arrive. An expected decrease in the general tax will not materialize—instead increase—in spite of the return of operative property to the tax rolls, by some feat of concentration, the board of supervisors has apparently discovered another channel, whereby to make use of the increased revenue, taxpayers agree.

Expenditures proposed in the preliminary general budget of Alemada county for 1935-36 exceed the actual expenditures of 1934-35 by $2,788,618. No doubt the taxpayers' spirits will rise when he learns that this will require a general county levy of $6,057,147, an increase of $1,738,735, or 40.26 per cent over the tax levy last year. The increase, based on the preliminary figures, will be almost half again as much as last year!

While the budget is being prepared, there is much official noise about changing tax rates and valuations, until the average property owner is half-drowned in figures, and confused to the point where he doesn't know his own valuation. However, in spite of excuses and explanations, the ultimate effect of the inevitable increase is illustrated by considering a particular piece of property. For example, the tax for general county purposes on a valuation of $3,000 last year was $33.90. That same property is threatened with a tax of $43.80 this year, whereas, if the benefit of the return of operative property were passed on to the taxpayer, a $3,000 valuation would pay only $30.00 in general county taxes this year, according to figures compiled by the California Taxpayers' Association.

Back in 1933, the taxpayer will remember, the Riley-Stewart amendments were enacted to reduce the tax burden on real property. The first step was taken at the time, when the state took over the general county support of the schools by means of the sales tax. The second and final step is now being taken in the return of operative property to local taxation, with promise of further relief for real property.

The preliminary budget of Alameda county does not indicate that the promised relief will be forthcoming. On the contrary, greatly increased tax bills are in prospect, the association says.

Died a Martyr as He Had Lived a Hero

Huey Long is dead. With him will be buried, temporarily, the idea of taxing great wealth out of existence. The suggestion will be resurrected; but in his death the philosophy of the greater distribution of wealth will have lost its most able champion.

He was ruthless in his methods—a dictator in every sense of the word—but his objective was to raise the standard of living of the great mass of poor whites in the south. He was a practical politician, not a dreamer. He fought entrenched greed with their own weapons, and whipped them. His enemies chose their own ammunition and rules of warfare, and he met them on the political field of action armed in kind.

Long was a spectacular figure. He shot through the official sky like a meteor. He stirred the imagination into awe, and held the mind expectant. He was a hero to thousands, anathema to corruptionists and a source of fear to immense wealth.

Dying by an assassin's bullet, he was buried a martyr, as he had lived a hero.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Theodore Gatlin decided to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But all his love for their foster daughter could not shelter her childhood from the hatred of his wife, who had never wanted her. Their affairs ended in the divorce court but ten-year-old Penelope was given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for two Sunday afternoons a month. On their first day together they set out joyfully to a baseball game. A ball, hit into the bleachers, struck Penelope on the nose and the neurotic Mrs. Gatlin removed her from the hospital to which her former husband had hurried her. Mrs. Gatlin spirited the child to Europe. Gatlin retired from business, willed Penelope all his money, and was about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ended his life.

CHAPTER II.—Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, a rising young psychiatrist, was presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl whose terrible childhood had left her with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" was in part responsible. McNamara did not think she was a responsible criminal and obtained Burt's expert testimony in court. Even Lanny, the doctor's faithful office nurse, was won over to her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior.

CHAPTER III.—Nance's criminal record outweighed Doctor Burt's clear explanation of her case and she was sent to San Quentin penitentiary for two years. Lanny visited her and Nance persuaded her to smuggle out a letter, which a confederate stole from her handbag outside the prison walls.

CHAPTER IV.—Nance escaped, although shot, by swimming out to a speed-boat manned by friends and went to Lanny's apartment. Lanny told Chief McNamara, who ordered her to bring Nance to his apartment and phoned for Doctor Burt.

CHAPTER V.—One of the men in the boat on which Nance escaped—two of them ex-convicts, the other a bootlegger—had been wounded and they went to Burt's office, where McNamara found them. The bootlegger he let go and he took the others to his home, ordering the uninjured one to care for Nance and his pal. From them he learned that Nance's real name was Penelope Gatlin. Detective Sergeants Flynn and Angelloti, seeking the reward offered for Nance's apprehension, went to Lanny's apartment in search of Nance. Looking over her San Quentin cell, McNamara found a blank check on a San Jose bank.

CHAPTER VI.—From the San Jose banker McNamara learned that the girl he knew as Nance Belden was Penelope Gatlin, heiress to $750,000. The banker did not know Penelope's whereabouts. Mrs. Gatlin was now the wife of a man named Merton. McNamara ordered Detective Sergeants Flynn and Angelloti to "lay off" Lanny, whom they suspected of harboring Nance.

CHAPTER VII.—When Lanny got home one evening she found Nance sound asleep, curled up on her guest-room bed. Several days later the hardboiled exterior of Nance Belden suddenly vanished and the girl became the refined Penelope Gatlin. Her partially restored memory led her to tell Lanny of her wealthy father, Theodore Gatlin, and of her girlhood in France.

"He's got me scared to death," Sapphire Susie declared, and commenced to weep a little; whereat

"He's Got Me Scared to Death," Sapphire Susie Declared.

McNamara realized she had been really frightened. She shook his hand warmly, thanked him and departed.

For several minutes McNamara sat thinking, a smile, faintly tender, illuminating his rugged countenance. So Lanny had kissed Sapphire Susie and given her a hundred dollars and begged her to be a good girl in the future. What a rare good sport Lanny was! And how good God had been to all concerned! In their pursuit of Nance, Flynn and Angelloti had followed such a hot trail they had forgotten Sapphire Susie was a pal of Nance's, but afterwards, when the trail grew cold, they had suddenly remembered her.

That Flynn was a marvel, and McNamara sighed to think the fellow could not be promoted instantly. In all probability he had not at first connected Nance Belden with the glory of Susie's sapphires. Undoubtedly he had jumped to the conclusion that the girl had been up to her old trick of blackmailing some wealthy and socially prominent masculine jackass. So he had looked up her record in the police files. Here he had discovered something that must have convinced him of Susie's total innocence of sapphires during her trial; certainly she had not carried them to San Quentin with her, and the obvious conclusion was that she had pawned them to raise money to pay her attorney. In the hope of discovering the identity of Susie's latest victim (who, he assumed, had redeemed them for her) Flynn had thereupon made a round of the pawnshops and located the one from which the jewels had lately been redeemed; from the pawnbroker he had secured a description of the one who had redeemed them. No pawnbroker would be likely to forget Nance Belden's nose!

McNamara shuddered. If Nance should visit Sapphire Susie now, she would undoubtedly walk straight into the arms of the waiting Flynn or Angelloti.

Well, Nance Belden had stolen a dozen pairs of silk hose, but apparently Penelope Gatlin paid her debts. The chief wondered if he had loaned Nance Belden or Penelope Gatlin two hundred dollars, for of course they were two separate and distinct personalities inhabiting the same body. If Nance Belden had accepted the loan, then McNamara could kiss the money good-by. If, on the other hand, Penelope Gatlin had accepted it, then, some day, when Nance had changed places with Penelope, he would get it back. Well, he could trace her progress through the world by the drafts she would cash. Her bank in San Jose would give him that information.

He took down the telephone and called the bank. Yes, a draft had just come in. Drawn for four hundred and thirty-five dollars in favor of the French line, dated three days previously at New York. It had come across the continent by air mail. McNamara thanked the president of the bank and called up the French line's San Francisco office. After some difficulty he discovered that four hundred and thirty-five dollars was payment of one first cabin passage to Havre and that the Ile de France had sailed from New York during the past three days.

Instantly Dan McNamara shot a straight telegram to police headquarters in New York, requesting that the passenger list of the Ile de France be checked to see whether Nance Belden or Penelope Gatlin had taken passage on her. Four hours later he received a reply to the effect that Nance Belden was not aboard but that Penelope Gatlin was.

"Nothing is lost if you know where it is," McNamara decided happily, and sent a cable to the prefect of police at Havre, requesting him to pick up Penelope Gatlin on her arrival at that port, shadow her and report by cable, collect, the girl's destination, the names and addresses of those who should meet her and any other information that would aid in keeping track of the girl.

The following day McNamara sent for Detective-Sergeants Flynn and Angelloti. As they ranged themselves, more or less at attention, in front of his desk, the chief leaned back in his chair and bent upon the pair a long, severe and penetrating look. They grew a little fidgety before he spoke.

"Well, boys, how are your private affairs prospering?"

Both shrugged, unwilling to be definite.

"They are unprosperous," the chief challenged, "so I have called you in to express the hope that you are now quite willing to abandon your private practice and return to work for the city and county of San Francisco. You draw salary from the taxpayers, you know. I may have been mistaken, Angelloti, but I thought I saw you out in Mission recently when you were supposed to be working on that racketeer killing over in North Beach. However, I'll overlook that on the assumption that you permitted yourself to be led astray by Flynn. Flynn, you lay off Sapphire Susie until that enterprising young woman does something you can pin on her. Then bring her in."

"She's done something and I'll pin it on her yet," Flynn growled, "and you know what it is." Flynn, being Irish, was unwilling that his chief should regard him as deficient in intelligence and enterprise.

"We understand each other thoroughly, Flynn. You've been after that Belden girl and you've made a mess of it." He opened his desk drawer and drew out two envelopes. One was addressed to Flynn and the other to Angelloti and both envelopes bore the return address of a prominent New York hotel, but were neither stamped nor postmarked. "These two envelopes came in a large envelope addressed to me," McNamara explained. "They're sealed!" He handed each detective his letter and watched as they opened them and drew forth typewritten letters and two hundred and fifty dollars in bills. Flynn's letter was, undoubtedly, a carbon copy of Angelloti's.

Flynn perused his letter and handed it to the chief, who read:

"Dear Mr. Flynn:

"You poor dear, you have worked so hard and so intelligently and in such dreadfully hard luck that my heart goes out to you. You were working for the reward, of course—no doubt because you needed the money. You and Mr. Angelloti would have had to divide two hundred and fifty dollars had you recaptured me, but just to prove I'm a sport and not holding any mean little grudge, I'm sending you each two hundred and fifty dollars. Please be good and try to forget all the unpleasant incidents. You will never get me now, so do give up your attempts, like good boys."

The letter was unsigned.

"How much did you get, Angelloti?" McNamara queried softly.

"Two fifty, Chief."

"Santa Claus has been good to you two, hasn't he? Well, are you both willing to go back to your regular jobs now?"

Flynn threw the money on the chief's desk. "We swore an oath—" he began, but McNamara cut him short.

"So have I!" he reminded Flynn fiercely.

"We know every move you've made in this case," Flynn shouted.

"And I knew every move you were going to make before you made it."

Angelloti tucked his present in his pocket. "Come on, Flynn," he urged.

"I can't be called off for money," Flynn persisted stubbornly.

Dan McNamara swept the money on his desk into the drawer. "The widows and orphans of the Policemen's Benevolent and Protective association will be glad to get this. On your way—you and your oath."

Flynn sighed deeply and went out. Fifteen minutes later he came back and said humbly: "Chief, I've changed my mind."

Alas! McNamara was Irish, too. He glanced at the clock. "You're fifteen minutes late, so I'll fine you two hundred and fifty dollars for tardiness and impudence and disloyalty and house-breaking."

"I'll get you for this, McNamara!"

"I don't think so. My advice to you, Pat Flynn, would be to quit monkeying with TNT. I've known detective-sergeants to be taken for a ride."

"Threatening me, eh?"

"Not at all. I wouldn't harm a hair of your red head—and by the way, red hair in the Irish is a sign that they breed back to the Danes and Swedes. A pure-bred Irishman would know enough to lay off a girl with powerful and implacable friends. All you were after was a hundred and twenty-five dollars—half the state reward for returning that girl—and when she sends you double that you're not sport enough to meet her half-way."

"I took an oath," Flynn mumbled.

"You should have taken a physic."

"Well, I did take an emetic. Chief, I'll never forgive you those tear and stink bombs."

"Well, you shadowed my house and entered it unlawfully."

"Well, I found a lipstick—"

"Belonged to the nurse I had looking after a sick friend of mine," the chief lied glibly.

But Flynn grinned ferociously. "I found stained bandages, too."

"Well, the pot can't get nowhere by calling the kettle black," McNamara decided. "Clear out!"

"Give me the money and I'll lay off."

But Dan McNamara shook his head. "I know your kind, Pat. There's no sense wasting good money on you because you won't stay bought. Clear out, I tell you."

So Flynn cleared out, carrying with him infinitely more respect for his chief than he had heretofore entertained. Well, some day he'd collect heavy interest on that two hundred and fifty dollars.

* * * * * * *

The last patient had left Stephen Burt's office for the day and the ever watchful Lanny had locked the office door.

"Tired, Stevie?" she queried anxiously, as he loaded his pipe.

"No, of course not," he replied abruptly. "What have I done to be tired?"

"Well, you had another session with that terrible Mrs. Merton."

"She doesn't weary me any more. She merely excites my sympathy. Still sleepless, of course, and still bothered about her poor devil of a husband. She's had detectives on his trail for a month. They've cost her ten dollars a day each and they haven't discovered anything to Merton's discredit."

"What a poor, beaten devil Merton is! He hasn't the courage of a mouse."

"What can he do, Lanny? His wife is unbalanced, but if he swears out a warrant charging her with insanity she'll snap out of her lunacy. Merton couldn't get to first base on an insane warrant."

"Then why don't he divorce her on grounds of mental cruelty?"

"The man's chivalrous and profoundly sympathetic. Besides, he hasn't any witnesses to prove a charge of mental cruelty. And he can't run away from her, because he has a thriving business he may not abandon. I told her again today not to come to my office any more; that I could do nothing for her; that she was a nuisance—and to try some other doctor. She went out in a rage."

Lanny jumped up. "Now who do you suppose that is knocking? Your office hours are plainly printed on the door."

"Oh, Lanny, don't be so hard-boiled. Let the patient in."

"Who's there?" Lanny shouted angrily.

"Oh! So it's you, is it? I knew you were there," the voice of Dan McNamara boomed.

Lanny unlocked the door and McNamara planted himself in the visitors' chair.

"You have news of Nance Belden," Stephen challenged.

"Gobs of it, Doctor."

Lanny entered with a highball. "I had a letter from Nance yesterday, Dan. She's in Paris. Can you beat that?"

"I can," McNamara replied coolly. "She's got an apartment at twenty-seven Rue St. Honore, with a cook and a maid, and a chauffeur who drives her around in a Citroen car. And she's having her picture painted."

"Divil a line. I have my information from the prefect of police of Paris."

"Dan, you're marvelous!"

"What's more, Lanny, she's living with her normal personality."

"How do you know?"

"She registered as required by law, under her real name of Penelope Gatlin. I've known her name since the day after her escape from San Quentin."

McNamara proceeded to relate the tale he had previously related to Stephen, who had neglected to retail it to Lanny. "Well, if this isn't a h—l of a tale, Dan!" she said.

"Does it beat your news, Lanny?"

"Beats it by a mile, although while she was at my house she told me as much about herself as she could remember."

"This morning," McNamara continued, "the president of the Security Trust company telephoned me that the girl's mother had called him up to ask if Penelope had been cashing any checks lately. The banker gathered that the mother has a notion her daughter's dead. She doesn't like the idea of having to wait seven years to have the girl declared officially dead before she can lay claim to Penelope's estate."

"Did you find out the name of her mother?" Stephen asked.

"Oh, yes. She's married again, you understand. Mrs. Rudolph Merton."

"She's a patient of Stevie's!" Lanny yelled. "She's such a nut the squirrels chase her."

Stephen finished writing and laid down his pen. "I told you, Lanny, that Mrs. Merton wasn't insane enough to be confined."

"Guess I've got Lanny's news beaten, after all, Stephen. This Mrs. Rudolph Merton is the girl's foster-mother."

"Hooray! Hooray! Hooray!" cried Lanny. "How do you know?"

"I wanted to investigate the girl's fortune. So yesterday I had a copy of the will and a copy of the appraisal of the estate made at the courthouse in San Jose and sent up to me. Gatlin stated in the will that he left all of his estate to his beloved adopted daughter, Penelope Gatlin. At the time of his death his estate was worth practically half a million dollars and has since doubled in value. Nance Belden is a lost heiress."

"Not wholly lost," Stephen reminded him. "There are times when she remembers who she is and that she has money."

"She doesn't know anything about her mother," Lanny declared. "I asked her, but she could tell me nothing. And she was Penelope Gatlin when I asked her."

There's lots of room in the FORD V-8

EVERY ONE who steps into the Ford V-8 for the first time is surprised at its roominess. There's exceptional seat room, leg room and head room in all body types — the whole car gives you a feeling of substantial size.

The Ford gives you extra body room because of the compact design of the V-8 engine — an exclusive Ford feature at a low price. This V-8 engine takes up less space in the hood and permits more of the car's length to be used for passenger comfort. Many a car selling at a higher price does not give you as much interior room as the Ford V-8.

Rear seats are wide and restful . . . three people can ride comfortably in the front seat of the Fordor Sedan, Fordor Touring Sedan, Convertible Sedan and Phaeton, and in the Coupes and Roadster. The seat of the Ford V-8 Roadster is 52 inches wide. A ride in the Ford V-8 will show that it combines unusual body room with fine-car performance, safety and comfort.

More than fifty members of the Centerville Lions Club and guests from other civic groups in this district, gathered at the Black 'N White, at Centerville, Tuesday night, to hear a discussion of state legislation by Senator William F. Knowland.

Norris, chairman, met at the Centerville justice court. The meet, scheduled for Wednesday night of last week, was postponed until yesterday.

The discussion, centering around a program to stimulate interest, touched on financial matters. The budget for this year has already been set, and met by a number of towns. Ancient Trees, Menace to Tots, Are Cut Down

Some of Centerville's oldest trees, which were constituting a menace to grammar school children, as well as interferring with electric wires, were cut down last week on the Centerville school property. Dying branches had been falling of late, to the peril of tots playing beneath.

The huge pine trees, bordering the sidewalk in front of the school, had been set out in 1875 by the orignal board of trustees of the school district. Members of the board were Henry Dusterberry, Garret S. Norris and Herman Eggers.

HUSKERS WILL OPEN SEASON TODAY AT PITTSBURG

Coach Jess Regli will take his 1935 Husker football team to Pittsburg this afternoon, for the first game of the season. The result will shed considerable light on the championship qualities of the eleven.

Lighter than last year, but with plenty of speed, the aggregation shows promise. The new material, filling breaches left by graduation of veterans, is expected to perform satisfactorily.

Regli's probable lineup for the intial gun will be: Jorgensen center, Harry Cesari and Bob Solon, guards; Milt Durham and Red Sinclair, tackles; Silva and Juarez, ends, and Muni, Harmon, Fisher and Mederios in the backfield. Al Muniz, shifty star half, is nursing a sprained ankle.

DODGES SENTENCE BUT ONLY FOR A VERY FEW DAYS

That it is a wise policy to follow the instructions of Judge J. A. Silva was painfully learned by John Rivera, of Irvington, recently, when he was sentenced to ten days in the county jail for failure to appear for sentence on a reckless driving count.

Rivera, who had been arrested by Traffic Officer Duffy Lewis on the charge, was found guilty in spite of his plea of innocence, and instructed to return for sentence at a later date. The stay of sentence was granted Rivera at his own request that he be given time to raise the money for the expected fine. When time for sentence came, Rivera failed to appear, and was finally brought before the Niles magistrate, after dodging officers for several days.

Judge Silva emphatically stated that such antics will not be tolerated in his district.

TOWNSHIP FOLK AMONG FIRST TO RIDE ON BRIDGE

In addition to the inspection of the bay bridge, the party also enjoyed a trip to the Golden Gate bridge. They were taken past the Yerba Buena shoals, where material from the huge island bore is being laid as a foundation for the World's Fair in 1938. Cutler pointed out that gondolas will be employed to transport spectators about part of the exhibition grounds.

A thrill of the trip, members of the party stated, came when the gentlemen were permitted an excursion up the cat-walk of the bay bridge. The high point of the day was an automobile ride from the Oakland side over the mile and a half completed section of the great bay span.

Homework Gets Done Faster and Better With an I.E.S. BETTER SIGHT LAMP

Is your child slow about his homework? Don't blame him. Perhaps it is the lighting under which he works. For poor lighting can make his homework unnecessarily difficult. It can cause eyestrain and fatigue, which can eventually result in defective vision.

Why not give him a lamp that is designed to give better light and that is kind to the eyes? The type of study lamp pictured here. It is specifically designed for better seeing by giving better light. A special glass bowl within the shade diffuses the light, removes glare and throws a generous amount of light to the ceiling for general illumination. Costs less than one cent more an evening than the light he is now using. Come in and see this better lamp that costs so little to buy and to use.

MORE ON SIX INJURED

ten feet from the point where the Johnson accident occurred, Clifford B. Bradford, of Edenvale, capsized his car, and suffered minor hurts. He was taken to a San Jose hospital, and discharged next day. On the Thursday following the accident, young Bradford committeed suicide. He was found hung in the family garage by his father.

At about 10 o'clock Sunday night, a car driven by Jose Herrera forced oncoming cars from the road at Klink's corner, near Warm Springs, then plunged from the highway into a dry stream course at the roadside. Herrera, who was said to be exceedingly drunk, was hurt sufficiently to warrant first aid treatment by an Irvington physician, before being taken into custody on a drunk driving charge by Capt. Louis Eieke and Officer A. Vanderkamp.

He will appear before Judge J. A. Silva on the charge.

Congregational Church News

"Words With double Meanings" will be the subject of the pastor's Sunday morning sermon. There are songs without words—and words without the possibility of song. Much of our present day confusion is due to confusing the two.

Sunday school meets between 10 and 10:55 a. m.

Christian Endeavor will meet in the fireplace room in the church. Mrs. Gordon will be the leader.

The boys' class, Mr. Gordon teacher, is organizing a naturalist club which promises to have wide popularity with the boys.

NEWLY DISCOVERED HORMONE HELPS MEN PAST 40

Generally around and after 40 one's vigor becomes impaired and his vitality lowered, due in many cases to mental and physical fatigue or to tired, sluggish glands.

A new discovered hormone (gland activator) has been found to be of remarkable help in improving vigor and increasing vitality. Clinical tests with this hormone have produced amazing results.

The hormone, fortified by other valuable agents, is now available in tablet form under the trade name of Zo-ak (blue package for men—orange package for women) and may be obtained at any drug store which will refund your money if you do not feel considerably benefited after taking Zo-ak uninterruptedly for one month.

An interesting booklet "For Men Who Want to Live" tells more about the hormone and how it helps men past 40. This booklet written by a distinguished American physician will be sent to you free in sealed envelope by Zo-ak Co., 56 W. 45th St., New York.

NORMAN H. PARKS, Publisher Register

tion. In numbers sufficient to throw fear into the hearts of the board of supervisors, the abused and ignored public should converge upon the county court house and make demands, not only upon the squandering supervisors, but upon practically every office holder who tolerates incompetents on his staff and loads up the pay-rolls with relatives and near-do-well friends.

The reason why taxes will be higher, rather than lower, is mighty easy to understand. What is true in Washington township, is true throughout the county.

Here at home we find that during the past year Supervisor Richmond has gotten his son on the pay-roll at a salary of $165 per month, with expenses thrown in. Everybody knows that the boy could not earn, in private industry, $12 a week. The office of supervisor of charity did not exist until this lad got the job. Was it really created for him, and in fact the functions connected therewith a dead loss to the taxpayer? Form your own conclusion.

Then there are the Ebrights, husband and wife. Between the two they are getting out of you, harried taxpayer, $435 per month. This is a crime. From two angles, it is a crime. Times like these, situations should spread out among as many families as possible. There is no justification—not any way you look at it—for a man and wife to both draw public pay. Then, again, the second angle of the crime is that neither are worth their salaries. Mrs. Ebright's work could be done efficiently for $25 per week. Hundreds of young, single women, who need work badly, or widowed women who have children to support, and in every way capable, would jump at the chance to fill the place at $100 per month, and furnish their own car and buy their own gasoline.

W. O. Ebright, the husband, working for Sheriff Driver, draws almost $200 a month, and $40 besides for gasoline. His services have never been satisfactory to Washington township people. Besides a few personal friends, he is universally disliked. He got his place through the influence of his father. He did not win his spurs on merit. Not much. Nor does he continue to wear them on merit.

These are some of the reasons why taxes are going up, not down. There are hundreds of other reasons. One of them, for instance, being expensive cars for office-holders.

Not long ago the board bought a car for the sheriff's office. No Ford or Chevrolet for the pampered tax-eating officers and their assistants. No sir-ree! The order called for a big Buick. Most expensive type. Think the warrant was for ever $2000.

And who got the order? Just a minute. Just a minute. Don't get impatient. It was Supervisor Richmond's brother at Hayward.

This matter was taken up with the district attorney's office, but purchase, apparently, got under the wire of legality by an eye-lash.

You know there is a lot in the statutes about board members or officials profiting by county contracts. Maybe it does not mean, in Alameda county at least, that the intent of the law was to take in your brother, sister, son, daughter, brother-in-law, sister-in-law or grandpa.

So there you are, docile boob who pays the bill. And what are you going to do about it? Like it, of course!

BLUEBIRD CLUB MAKES PLANS FOR 16th ANNUAL BALL

Members of the Bluebird Club, Newark, met last Thursday night at the home of the president, Miss Lida Francis, to make final arrangements for the sixteenth annual Hallowe'en ball. Everything possible will be done to make the dance a social and financial success.

President Francis has urged all members to spread word of the dance to all corners of the county, stating that the success of the affair means support for the benevolent work of the club, principally the Community Christmas Tree, when every kiddie and parents are guests of the club for the evening. Many needy families have been assisted by the club.

Among those who are taking active part in the success of the affair are: Julia Ruschin, Elsa Mikkelsen, Marie Duarte, Violet Manley, Mildred Blacow, Beatrice Miller, Dorothy Gibson, Mabel Callow, Rose Santos and Emily Reider.

Judge and Mrs. J. A. Silva and family have returned from a vacation spent at Pacific Grove.
